RE: Paper submission - Scientific financial funding in Colombia, from 2000 to 2012.

Dear members Dr. Alberto Acosta,

I would like to thank you for your work in this growing multidisciplinary Journal. In this communication I am submitting a paper on the scientific budget analysis of Colombia, South America. The present manuscript shows current trends in the Colombian scientific budget using the methodology published by Dorsey ER, et al in his paper: "Financial anatomy of biomedical research. JAMA: the journal of the American Medical Association. 2005; 294(11):1333-42.". The community will find this paper relevant in the understanding of the ongoing fluctuations of the scientific portfolio in developing countries. Currently there is little information about past and current trends in Colombia. This manuscript "Scientific financial funding in Colombia, from 2000 to 2012" shows a retrospective analysis in the past twelve years in both the economic and political efforts done in Colombia.

The present unpublished manuscript meets legal-ethics of the analyzed data and is not currently being evaluated in another journal. Also, the author declares no conflicts of interests.

The author suggests the following international-national reviewers for the present manuscript:
